Panel Discussion

Rethinking Venture Capital: What Can & Should The Industry Do To Again Make It Attractive To LPs?

Does the venture capital industry need to rethink the way it operates? This panel dives into a sector which has struggled to generate strong returns in a timely fashion, and, which, in turn, is losing the support of limited partners. They'll look at whether partnerships should go beyond the normal 10-year structure, and whether venture-backed companies should issue dividends. They'll discuss whether venture capitalists should be working more closely with corporations to identify their true needs. And they'll, of course, weigh in on what they think the venture industry should do to right itself.
